

Landing $200+ Bar Gigs

As you can see in this module, I managed to pull off a decent demonstration for the young lady at the bar while a friend filmed it. It was only a few weeks later that the bar owner said they were looking for some unique types of entertainment and thought I might be “the guy”. After telling them about this footage, they actually requested to see it as they were intrigued since no one told them this had happened at their bar. I ended up closing them on a $200 contract. Just imagine, if things go well after your first paid gig at a venue like this, you may have found a repeat client.

So, when you’re out and about, feel free to give someone a quick demonstration. Simply make them feel good by relieving stress or, if they’re up for it, make them experience phenomena such as spontaneous laughter or name amnesia. Either way, be sure to film the demonstration and then show it to the bar owner later. State that many bars host karaoke and live bands but you could help boost their business at least once every so many months with your unique skills of hypnosis. This is an easy way for you to make an extra $200+. If things turn out well, you can even raise your price at least $100-$200. I’ve done a number of bar shows for $400-$600. Even if they reject you, there’s often at least one bar in your area willing to give you a try (just be sure to have a quick demo ready if they demand an on-the-spot audition).
